COSY STOCKHOLM

IMMERSE, EXPLORE & UNWIND

Gabriele Gugetzer, Daniel Bruno Grandl

Stockholm at Its Most Inviting

Set amid water, islands, and clean Scandinavian design, Stockholm has a rhythm all its own. Gabriele Gugetzer writes about the Swedish capital with warmth, curiosity, and an eye for the extraordinary, while photographer Christina Uhlin captures both the fresh Scandi look of summer and the cosy atmosphere of winter. From Gamla Stan and the Royal Palace, the journey continues through Södermalm and Djurgården to Drottningholm. Personal portraits and surprising stories offer new perspectives on fika, Svenskt Tenn, Hilma af Klint, and a world where design meets tradition. A visually stunning portrait of the city for everyone who wants to discover Stockholm, return to it, and bring a little Nordic serenity home with them.

Stockholm at its cosiest - atmospheric, relaxed, and quintessentially Scandinavian

Neighbourhood by neighbourhood: from Gamla Stan and Södermalm to the islands of the Stockholm archipelago

Discover the spirit of Stockholm - where Nordic serenity, design, and a deep connection to nature come together

The Photographer

Christina Uhlin is a photographer and filmmaker with more than 30 years of experience. After studying photography in Stockholm, she worked for Aller Media for over 20 years. Her work focuses on people, food, gardens, and interiors—and the stories that places have to tell. Today, she lives and works in Skåne and travels throughout Sweden with her camera.

MOUNTAINWOMEN

Nina Ruhland, Manuela Federl

The Alps shape their lives. They shape the Alps.

For these women, the Alps are more than just a backdrop: they are home, workplace, and a living environment they actively help shape. In her literary reportage, Nina Ruhland offers intimate insights into the lives of 15 women navigating the space between tradition and new beginnings. She accompanies a midwife on visits to farms in the Bernese Oberland and meets an emergency doctor with the Tyrolean air rescue service, mountaineer Alix von Melle, and glaciologist Andrea Fischer. Manuela Federl's atmospheric photography immerses us in the world of these inspiring women. Together, their stories create a powerful, multifaceted portrait of life in the Alps—deeply connected to nature, rich in expertise, and driven by the courage to forge one's own path. For everyone who loves stories about strong women and the mountains.

Strong women from the Alps - shaped by life in and with the mountains

Literary reportage exploring gender roles, self-determination, change, and everyday life in the mountains

Authentically written and photographed by two journalists and certified mountain hiking guides

The Author

Nina Ruhland, who grew up in the Ruhr region, initially moved north: to Münster to study political science and to Hamburg to work as an editor for major publishing houses. At some point, however, her longing for the mountains became so strong that she made the Bavarian Alps her new home. Today, she is a freelance author and international mountain guide and lives with her family in the Ammergau Alps. With her mountain school, which specializes in sustainable tours, and her books, she satisfies people's longing for the mountains in a unique way.

The Photographer

Manuela Federl has worked as a freelance photographer, filmmaker, and International Mountain Leader for more than ten years. For five years, she directed and curated a film festival in the Chiemgau region. She has received numerous awards for her documentary films and photography, and her work has been featured in exhibitions in Germany and abroad.

NO MORE DRAMA

INNER PEACE AND POSITIVE ENERGY IN 28 DAYS

Sigi Heidi Hohner

Break free from Overthinking

Drama is not a character trait, but a habit. In her book, psychologist and coach Sigi Heidi Hohner takes women on a transformative 28-day journey out of mental exhaustion, chronic stress and negative thought spirals. With a unique blend of neuropsychology, embodiment, spirituality and practical exercises for everyday life, she shows how to break emotional patterns, calm the nervous system and allow a new sense of joy in life to emerge.
Honest, empowering and scientifically grounded – for all women who want to stop merely 'functioning' and start feeling their lives again.

28 days to greater ease, clarity, and inner calm

A fresh impulse every day: with storytelling, evidence-based insights, and practical exercises

Includes meditations, audio exercises, and affirmations, accessible via QR code

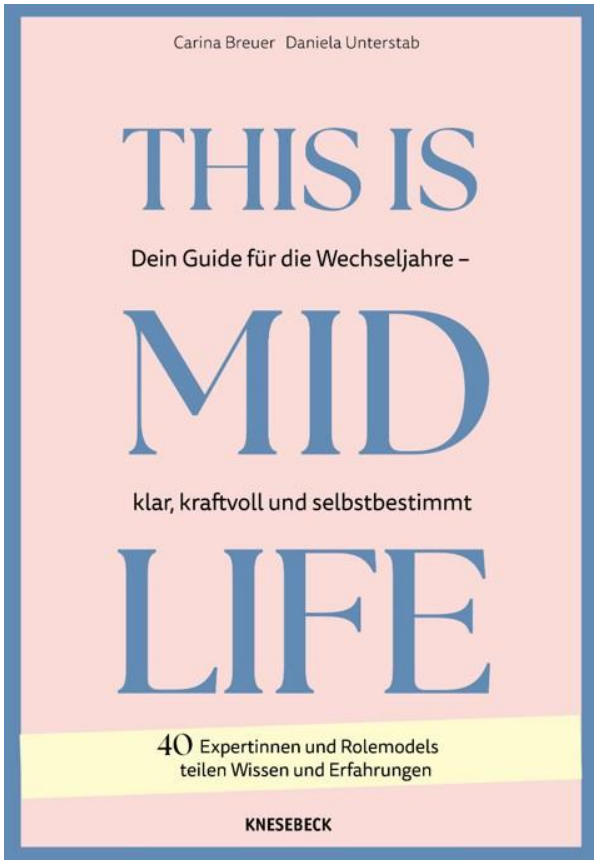
The Author

Sigi Heidi Hohner is a qualified psychologist, author, and coach specialising in emotional confidence and lasting change. She works with empathetic women who already understand a great deal—but want to finally put that knowledge into practice in their own lives. Her approach combines psychological depth with clear, practical tools and encouraging guidance. Because real change happens when we move beyond understanding and dare to actually do things differently.

THIS IS MIDLIFE

YOUR GUIDE TO THE MENOPAUSE – CLEAR, EMPOWERING AND SELF-DETERMINED

Carina Breuer, Daniela Unterstab



For the most powerful stage of a woman's life

Menopause has long since become more than just a medical issue - for many women, it marks the beginning of a new, self-determined stage of life. This Is Midlife combines sound knowledge with the experiences of inspiring women and insights from renowned female experts to create a modern lifestyle guide to (peri)menopause. Taking a holistic approach to health, nutrition, exercise, mindset, and social issues, the book dispels myths, offers encouragement, and highlights the potential of this stage of life.

An inspiring companion for women who want to navigate menopause with clarity, confidence, and on their own terms.

Rethinking menopause: evidence-based knowledge, personal experiences, and practical tips for everyday life

Insights from renowned experts and role models provide guidance and encouragement

A modern magazine-style format exploring physical and mental health, society, and the world of work

16,0 x 32,2 cm | softcover with flaps |

The Authors

Carina Breuer is a communications expert and author. Her own experiences of menopause, many unanswered questions, and returning to university in her late forties have reshaped her perspective on growing older. Today, she writes about this stage of life on her platform MENOMENTE.de, putting knowledge into context, exploring different perspectives, and creating space for open dialogue - with clarity, curiosity, and a practical approach to everyday life.

Daniela Unterstab is a graphic designer, blogger, and founder of dieAlte.de. She launched the platform in 2021, inspired by her own rather clueless journey through menopause. Today, she uses it to share knowledge and experiences and to give experts and strong voices a platform. As part of the #wirsind9millionen initiative, she campaigns for greater visibility and awareness of menopause.

MAYBE THIS IS HOME

ABOUT SEARCHING, STAYING AND THE COURAGE TO SETTLE DOWN

Katharina Katz

Maybe finding our place begins the moment we stop searching for a better life

We can live anywhere - but why is it so difficult to truly feel at home somewhere? When a burst water pipe forces Julia to move back into her parents' home on Germany's North Sea coast, what begins as a temporary solution turns into a journey exploring some of the big questions of our time: What makes a place feel like home? How much freedom do we need—and how much commitment?
Katharina Marisa Katz writes about the "homesick generation": a generation with endless possibilities, yet at the same time filled with a longing to belong. Moving between memories, old friendships, family, and life itself, she creates an insightful and moving book about searching, staying, and finding the courage to put down roots.
A highly relevant contemporary theme with strong appeal for anyone caught between setting out and putting down roots.

Between our roots and finding our place: What does home really mean?

A literary and deeply personal exploration of belonging, freedom, and the longing for stability

A beautifully designed gift book

NARRATIVE NON-FICTION

The Author

Katharina Marisa Katz is an author, editor, and ghostwriter. She lives with her family in Hamburg and loves books with heart, intelligence, and something to say - as well as well-crafted sentences, clear structures, and Franzbrötchen. She has worked on more than 50 book projects and loves that thrilling feeling when you realize: this idea is going to work.

SETTING OUT ALONE, COMING BACK AS TWO

HOW I TRAVELLED WITH NOTHING BUT A HAMMOCK FROM THE ARCTIC CIRCLE ALMOST TO THE BLACK SEA

Johanna Geils

3,000 Kilometres, a Hammock, and an unexpected Travel Companion

Six months, 3,000 kilometres, and a hammock: Johanna Geils sets out to hike from the Arctic Circle to the Black Sea. Travelling alone, she makes her way through the Finnish wilderness, the Baltic states, and the High Tatras before joining the Via Transilvanica. With humour and refreshing honesty, she recounts nights under the open sky, unexpected encounters, and the fine line between a thirst for adventure and pushing yourself too far. But in Romania, a little stray dog joins her—and turns her plans upside down. Johanna chooses her new companion and returns home a month earlier than planned. What begins as an epic hiking adventure becomes a moving story about responsibility, connection, and the courage not only to set out, but also to change direction.
